II. READING (50 points)

For questions 1 - 10, read the passage and do as directed.

To examine your career options, you should first gather as much information as possible. Here are some places where you can get advice.

School

Your careers library will have some basic information on a variety of occupations. Ask the librarian questions like:

- What does someone with this job do?
- What subjects do I need to study?
- What courses are available?
- How long will it take to train?

Shared by Angels of Otto Channel

Also use careers advisors to expand your list of career ideas by finding out about related options. Many schools have work experience programs which give you the chance to check out a job which interests you.

Career Information Centres

Resources in these centres include printed information about jobs, and tertiary study reference materials such as university and college handbooks. There are 12 Career Information Centres throughout the country. Assistance from staff is also available.

Employers

You could talk to employers in areas you find interesting. You might ask them questions such as:

- What are the most demanding aspects of this work?
- What is the most preferred method of entry?
- Are there courses which will prepare me for this work?

Parents, friends, relatives

Relatives and friends can be helpful in giving you insights into the daily routine of an occupation. By questioning them, you can expand your knowledge of the work. Another option is to use this group to arrange industry contacts or check out possible vacancies.

Universities and colleges

These institutions have careers advisors for prospective students. You can also take advantage of their open days. During these days, you can have a look at the facilities offered and chat to the students and lecturers.

Internet

Don't forget the Internet. One great site to start at is the government careers directory.

Getting it all together

You will no doubt gather lots of information, but it is easy to forget details, so you should collect the information using a folder or filing system. Check that your information is kept up-to-date.

Using the words or phrases provided to complete the summary below.

open days	career options
work experience programs	lecturers (1)
university and college handbooks	industry contacts
knowledge of the work (2)	Career Information Centres
careers advisors (1)	basic information

Both schools and universities have (1) _____ to assist students with job information. Schools may also run (2) _____ for practice at specific jobs. There are several (3) _____ which advise clients on careers.

For questions 11 - 20, read the following passage and choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for each of the questions.

Most languages have several levels of vocabulary that may be used by the same speakers. In English, at least three have been identified and described.

Standard usage includes those words and expressions understood, used, and accepted by a majority of the speakers of a language in any situation regardless of the level of formality. As such, these words and expressions are well-defined and listed in standard dictionaries. Colloquialisms, on the other hand, are familiar words and idioms that are understood by almost all speakers of a language and used in informal speech or writing, but not considered acceptable for more formal situations. Almost all idiomatic expressions are colloquial language. Slang, however, refers to words and expressions understood by a large number of speakers but not accepted as appropriate formal usage by the majority. Colloquial expressions and even slang may be found in standard dictionaries but will be so identified. Both colloquial usage and slang are more common in speech than in writing.

Colloquial speech often passes into standard speech. Some slang also passes into standard speech, but other slang expressions enjoy momentary popularity followed by obscurity. In some cases, the majority never accepts certain slang phrases, but nevertheless retains them in their collective memories. Every generation seems to require its own set of words to describe familiar objects and events.

It has been pointed out by a number of linguists that three cultural conditions are necessary for the creation of a large body of slang expressions. First, the introduction and acceptance of new objects and situations in the society; second, a diverse population with a large number of subgroups; third, association among the subgroups and the majority population.

Finally, it is worth noting that the terms "standard," "colloquial," and "slang" exist only as abstract labels for scholars who study language. Only a tiny number of the speakers of any language will be aware that they are using colloquial or slang expressions. Most speakers of English will, during appropriate situations, select and use all three types of expressions.

11. Which of the following is the main topic of the passage?

- A. Standard speech and writing
- B. Idiomatic phrases
- C. Different types of vocabulary ✓
- D. Dictionary usage

12. Which of the following is true of standard usage?

- A. It can be used in formal or informal settings. ✓
- B. It is limited to written language.
- C. It is only understood by the upper classes.
- D. It is constantly changing.

13. Which of the following is true of colloquialisms?

- A. Colloquialisms are found in both speech and writing in formal settings.
- B. Familiar situations that are experienced by most people of a language are called colloquialisms.
- C. Informal language contains colloquialisms, which are not found in more formal language.
- D. Colloquialisms can be used in both formal and informal speech in appropriate situations.

14. According to the author, what is slang?

- A. Words and phrases accepted by the majority for formal usage and found in standard dictionaries.
 B. Words and phrases understood by the majority but not found in standard dictionaries.
 C. Words and phrases that are understood by a restricted group of speakers.
 D. Words and phrases understood by a large number of speakers but not accepted as formal usage.

 C. in formal situations
 D. in standard writing

18. The author mentions all of the following as requirements for slang expressions to be created EXCEPT

- A. new situations
 B. a new generation
 C. interaction among diverse groups
 D. a number of linguists

19. The word "diverse" could best be replaced by

- A. different
 B. minor
 C. numerous
 D. major

20. It can be inferred from the passage that the author

- A. does not approve of either slang or colloquial speech in any situation
 B. approves of colloquial speech in some situations, but not slang
 C. approves of slang and colloquial speech in appropriate situations
 D. does not approve of colloquial usage in writing

Four of the world's best beaches

Which are the best beaches on Earth? Here are our top four

A Rodas Beach, the Cies Islands, Spain

Some of Spain's most spectacular beaches lie in Galicia on the Atlantic coast, and perhaps the most stunning of these are on the Cies Islands. These unspoilt and uninhabited islands are a national park, with public access limited to the summer months, and contain the perfectly-shaped Rodas Beach with its pure white sand and clear blue sea. At first sight it almost seems tropical, until dipping your toe in the water encourages you to spend a lazy day on the beach rather than dive in for a swim. There you can enjoy the quiet, the warmth of the sun and the scent of pine from the nearby woods, and later on have an excellent meal in the reasonably-priced fish restaurant close to the beach.

B Whitehaven Beach, Whitsunday Islands, Australia

Australia is famous for wonderful beaches, and Whitehaven must surely be one of its very best. Set against a background of amazingly-green tropical forest, and with views across the clear blue ocean to distant small islands, the sandy white beach is like something from a picture postcard or a TV commercial. As you would expect in such a sunny climate, the water is pleasantly warm, ideal for swimming on or below the surface. The sand, in contrast, always remains cool as it is of a type that reflects the sunlight, so you won't need sandals. As the island has no permanent inhabitants, and most day trippers leave by boat quite early, in the late afternoon and evening you can have the place almost to yourself.

C Matira Beach, Bora Bora, Tahiti

Matira Beach on the Pacific island of Bora Bora has incredibly white sand, beautiful fish swimming in clear blue-green water, and stunning sunsets. The air temperature hardly varies around the year, and neither does that of the ocean - which is only waist-high even hundreds of metres from the shore. And unlike windier beaches nearby, Matira is quite well-sheltered. There isn't, however, much shade, so it is advisable to use plenty of sun cream, and the sand can feel uncomfortably hot unless you wear beach shoes or something similar. There is no charge to visit the beach, yet it rarely becomes crowded at any time of day. Everyone should go there at least once in life, and when you do, make sure you have your photo taken as the sun goes down.

D Anse Source d'Argent Beach, Seychelles

This must be one of the most photographed beaches in the world, so don't forget to get some shots of your own, especially of the sea and the sand framed by the background of enormous pink rocks, with tall palm trees right behind them. It's easy to see why commercials have been made there. The patches of brilliantly white sand between those beautiful rocks make it the perfect place to spend a relaxing day, and it is well worth the small amount it costs for access. The best spots - those with both sunshine and shade - quickly get taken, so make sure you arrive well before the sun starts to beat down and the sand heats up.

For questions 41 - 50, read the text below and think of ONE word that best fits each gap.

The world's friendliest city

A team social psychologists from California has spent six years studying the reactions of people in cities around the world to (41) some situations. The results show that cities where people have less money generally have friendlier populations. Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, which is often known for its crime, comes out top, and the capital of Malawi, Lilongwe, comes third.

But what makes one city friendlier than (42) others? The psychologists from California State University say it has got more to do with environment than (43) _____ or nationality. They carried out a study into the way locals (44) _____ strangers in 23 cities around the world. The team (45) did their research through a series of tests, where they (46) _____ pens or pretended they were blind and needed help crossing the street. The study concludes that people are more helpful in cities (47) _____ a more relaxed way of life such as Rio. While they were there, researchers received help in 93 percent of cases, and the percentage in Lilongwe was only a little lower. However, richer cities such as Amsterdam and New York are (48) not the least friendly. Inhabitants of Amsterdam helped the (49) _____ in 53 percent of cases and in New York just 44 percent. The psychologists found that, in these cities, people tend to be short of time, so they hurry and often (50) ignore strangers.
