Grass is probably the most successful living plant in the world. There are over 9,000 different types of grass and they are found in every region on the earth. They are the only flowering plants that can exist in the freezing environment of the Arctic and the Antarctic.

Grasslands support a wide range of animal life, from tiny insects and birds to huge animals like cows and lions. All of them depend on grass in one way or another.

Grass recovers very quickly after it is cut or damaged. Unlike other plants, the new leaves grow from below the soil, not from the top of the plant. That is why large families of animals are able to live together in one area. As soon as they have eaten all the grass there, a fresh meal is always available because the plants start to grow again.

1. How many types of grass are found in every region on the earth?
2. Do animals depend on grass?
.....
3. Do the new leaves of grass grow from below the soil or from the top of the plant?
.....
4. Why is a fresh meal always available for animals although they have eaten all the grass there?
.....
